WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18.

A Boston Romance.

From the Boston Courier.

About eighteen months ago, a young gentleman, living on Commonwealth avenue, was smitten with a violent passion for a pretty servant employed in his mother's house. They were married secretly, but the family early discovered the state of affairs, and there was a terrible time. It was proposed to the erring son that his low-born wife should be given a certain sum of money, and sent so far away that she could never trouble him. It is presumed he regretted his hasty act, for he accepted the terms, and the girl was sent away. The matter was confined to members of the family, with the exception of an aunt of the young man, who helped furnish the money to buy the silence of the girl, not even the most intimate friends having an idea of the way things stood. The young gentleman, of course, passed for an unmarried man.

About six months after the disappearance of his wife, he met a beautiful girl at Cambridge, with whom he fell desperately in love. She was lovely, accomplished, and his equal in birth and fortune. He paid her marked attention for several months, and finally offered himself in marriage. The young lady accepted him, and the engagement was announced. Now, during this time the aunt, who knew his secret, had been taken violently insane, and was put in the McLean Asylum for treatment. The Cambridge young lady, who we will call Miss White, had a sister in the same asylum, who was insane from melancholy. Miss White frequently visited her sister, and continued to do so after her engagement, even speaking of her coming happiness during one of her visits. One day one of the keepers at the asylum said to the melancholy patient: "Miss White, your sister is coming to see you to-day." In the opposite gallery the aunt of the young man was confined, and she overheard the message. She immediately called out: "I must see your sister when she comes; I have a secret to tell her." Accordingly when Miss White called, the aunt found means to see her, and after asking if it was true she was engaged, told her the story of the young man's marriage, and that he had never been divorced. The young lady was almost stunned, although, obtaining the news in such a place, she could hardly believe it. Returning home, she told her father what she had heard, and, upon investigation, he found it true. At this time the invitations for the wedding were out and all preparations made. Miss White sent her betrothed husband a note asking him to call at a certain time. When he arrived she walked into the room and in the presence of her parents accused him of his treachery and the terrible position in which he had nearly placed her. He did not attempt a denial, and could not find anything to say in extenuation, except that he loved her and thought that his wife would never appear. The young lady suffered a serious illness, which sufficed as a pretext for recalling the invitations. The kind of honor in a family which could permit such a thing to go on, and allow an innocent girl to be sacrificed, ought to be bound in a separate edition of the Blue Book.

Get a Home.
Get a home; rich or poor, get a home, and learn to love that home, and make it happy to wife and children by your presence. Learn to love simple pleasures; flowers of God's own planting, and music of his own—the birds, wind and rainfall; so shall you help to stem the tide of desolation, poverty and despair that comes upon so many through scorn of little things. Oh, the charm of a little home! Comforts dwell there that shun the gilded halls of society. Live humbly in your small home, and look to God for a grander one.—Ex.

Articles of incorporation of the Aztec Canal and Irrigating Company were filed with Secretary Van Arman, in Prescott last week. The capital stock is $30,000, in shares of $100; duration, ninety-nine years. The purpose of the company is to stake out and build a canal near Florence, Arizona, and reclaiming fifty thousand acres of land.

In Des Moines the number of saloons has increased from 60 to 102 since the so-called 'prohibition' went into effect. As these sellers have no license to pay, they can stand an occasional confiscation of stock, which is kept low in expectation of such emergencies.

Burglar Stories.

From All the Year Around.

One day as a dear old lady was going to bed in a remote chamber in a big house, she accidentally perceived a man hidden under the bedstead. She knelt down by the bedside and repeated aloud the beautiful collect of the evening prayer of the Church of England. She then blew out her candle and quietly got into bed. Presently a voice sounded underneath the bed, telling her not to be afraid, and that he would do her no harm. The burglar then came out and said that this was his first offence, and that he had been driven to it by poverty. He added that the words of the collect had recalled to him the time when he was innocent, and that, if she would only forgive him, he would go away quietly and not offend against the law again. The story goes on to say that the man was truly repentant and that the good lady saw him earning an honest living.

I know one or two cases in which there has been great courage on the side of the attacked party and great cowardice on that of the burglar. In fact, this is generally the case when burglars have to deal with police. I have a friend, a slight, delicate lady, who has shown marvelous courage in cowing a burglar. She went into the kitchen one night, when the servants were out or had gone to bed, and found a man in the act of packing up all her silver plate. She resolutely locked the kitchen door, put the key in her pocket, and told him that he should not leave the room until he had placed back every article of silver where he had found it. The man obeyed her in the most abject manner, and then was allowed to sneak out of the place.

The Loco Weed.

Kansas is becoming considerably alarmed at the spread upon its pasturelands of the loco weed, that mysterious plant so baneful yet alluring to horses and cattle. It is said that animals that have once tasted it seek eagerly for it, though its consumption is followed by madness, emaciation and death. Nor is its virulent effects confined only to the brute creation. A recent dispatch from San Antonio, Texas, chronicles the death in the State mad-house of Peter B. Feer, formerly ticket agent at that place of the Sunset Route. The direct cause of his insanity is unknown, though dark hints are made that a draught of loco tea was drunk by him. Of this tea the Mexicans say it only takes one draught to render a man insane, and all the stages of insanity mild, violent, and finally an imbecile before death, are sure to follow. It is made of this loco weed, which grows in many localities on the western plains, and is similar to the northern milk-weed being of a lightish green color and when broken furnishes a milky sap. The most careful analysis of the plant has failed to disclose the poison plant, but that it exists seems undoubted and Colorado offers a State bounty of one and a half cents per pound for all that is uprooted.—Exchange.

A Wonderful Soil.

"Speakin' of productive soil," said the man from Dakota, "the half has never been told. A few weeks ago my wife said: 'Why, John, I believe you've took to growin' again.' I measured myself, and I hope Gabriel'll miss me at the roundup if I hadn't grown six inches in two weeks. I couldn't account for it for some time, till at last I tumbled to the fact that war holes in my boots and the internal soil got in there and done its work. Did you see that boy that was with me on the street this morning? Looks like he war about 18 years old. Wal' about six months ago my wife said our six-months old kid down in the plowed ground to play, an' gents, I'll be doggone if—but you wouldn't believe that if I told it. Yes, it is a wonderful country, gents! I could sit here for a year relat'ing actual facts' but I must rush out an' do some tradin'. I've got to buy a hatchet to shingle my barn with. I left my old hatchet out over night last week, an' in the morning it was a full-grown axe. Good-by."

How to get your coal in: "Mamma—Johnny, will you please bring in a hod of coal?"
Johnny—In a minute.
Mamma—Come, Johnny dear, I'm in a hurry to get papa's supper.
Johnny—In a minute.
The Old Man—John!
The coal is there in seven seconds.—Chicago News.

The revolting statement is given out that the skin of Campi, the Paris murderer, has been tanned and will be used in binding the books and documents relating to his crime.
